War Memorials

The vestibule of Fitzroy Presbyterian Church houses war memorial plaques for the Fitzroy Avenue, Donegall Pass and Crescent congregations (the latter having been transferred following mergers in 1973 and 1976 respectively), and the 9th Boys' Brigade Company Old Boys' Association.

The Fitzroy Avenue War Memorial consists of two bronze tablets on a wooden plaque. The Great War tablet, designed by Messrs Osborne and Company of London for $\pounds148~00~00$ in 1921, names 85 men who served, and sixteen men who paid the ultimate sacrifice, in the Great War. The Presbyterian Church in Ireland's "Roll of Honour" lists 67 men who served, and sixteen men who died, in the Great War.

The lower tablet, designed by the same company at a cost of £167~09~02, lists the ten servicemen who died in the Second World War and was unveiled on Sunday 8th November 1953 by Brigadier Ian Fraser DSO OBE MD FRCS. The Order of Service is re-produced below.

The Donegall Pass War Memorial is a white marble panel on a black marble plaque and was transferred to Fitzroy Presbyterian Church in July 1973. It names the 26 men who paid the ultimate sacrifice in the Great War and the five men who died for freedom in the Second World War. The Presbyterian Church in Ireland's "Roll of Honour" lists 56 men who served, and 25 men who died, in the Great War.

The Crescent War Memorial is a brass panel on a wooden plaque and was transferred to Fitzroy Presbyterian Church in January 1976. It lists the 162 men who served, and the 27 men who paid the ultimate sacrifice, in the Great War. The Presbyterian Church in Ireland's "Roll of Honour" lists 171 men who served and 26 men who died in the Great War. As there are anomalies between the two sets of records, a total of 31 men from the Crescent congregation died in the Great War.
